THREE A'S DEFEATED.

Bellefonte Athletic Association Too Strong for the Altoona Boys.

Through the excellent playing of the Bellefonte Athletic Association, the Three A's of Altoona were defeated by a score of 24 to 18.

It was one of the most exciting games seen here this season, as the Altoona Athletic Association has one of the strongest basket ball teams in the state.

During the first half the boys from the Railroad city did some fine playing but in the last period they were utterly unable to stop the accurate goal throwing of the B. A. C.

McNevin and Hargraves won the laurels on the Altoona team while Gephart, Newbaker together with the balance of our team did beautiful work and showed elegant training. It was one of the cleanliest games played here this season. The Altoona boys were perfectly satisfied with the out come and took their defeat like heroes.

Manager Ray is certainly to be congratulated with the many victories his boys are winning, and it is to be hoped they will continue to overcome the opposing teams in all the games to be played the balance of the season.

He leaves a wife, but no children. Mr. Furst was born in the east end of Nittany valley. He spent all his life within three miles, of his birth place engaged in farming until his broken health compelled him to retire from the farm, at which time he moved to the village of Salona where he died. He was a consistent member of the Lutheran church for many years and lived a life in accordance with his professed principles. DEATH OF JOHN M. DALE

Passed away Thursday Evening at 10:35 O'clock.

WAS DUE TO APOPLEXY

Came From One of the County's Oldest Families and Was One of the Leading Attorneys at the Centre County Bar.

A CAUSE FOR GENERAL SORROW

That "Death loves a shining mark" is proven only too true in the sad ending of the earthly career of John M. Dale Esq., one of the leading attorneys at the Centre county bar, who passed away at his home on East Linn street Thursday at twenty-five minutes of eleven. Young, brilliant, just in the prime of life, with a host of warm friends and many years of usefullness seemingly stretching out before him, "God's finger touched him and he slept."

On Tuesday evening he attended a meeting of the Masonic fraternity and took an active part and was in the best of health and spirits. He went home about 11 o'clock refusing to partake of any refreshments and accompanied by Harry Keller Esq., a friend and brother attorney. About 3 o'clock in the morning he was taken ill and Dr. George F. Harris was summoned. He was found to be suffering from a stroke of apoplexy and the right side of his body was paralyzed. He lingered until Thursday night when his heart began to weaken and he passed away just forty-four hours after being seized with the attack.

John M. Dale Esq., was widely known in social, business and political circles in the central part of the state. He was the fifth generation of the Dale family who have lived in Centre county.

John Mitchell Dale was the son of William Dale and Mary Mitchell Dale and was born at Neshannock Falls, Lawrence county, Penn., on the 11th of November 1861. His parents removed from there to the old homestead in Centre county about three years afterward and continued to reside there. He entered the Pennsylvania State College in 1878 and graduated with the class of 1882. The same year he began the study of law and in 1883 entered the law offices of Beaver & Gephart at Bellefonte and under their direction read law and was admitted to the Bar of Centre county on the 1st of January, 1886. Directly after his admission to the Bar he went to Lock Haven where he engaged in the practice of law in connection with Capt. W. C. Krebs, of that place, afterward the State Law Reporter.

On April 12, 1886 Mr. Dale returned to Bellefonte entering the law firm of Beaver, Gephart & Dale. This partnership continued until November 1, 1893 when Mr. Gephart withdrew. Gen. Beaver having returned to Bellefonte after his term as Governor had expired the firm became Beaver & Dale. This continued until July 1895 when owing to Gen. Beaver being appointed to the Superior Court bench it was dissolved, Mr. Dale continuing the practice of law alone. In politices Mr. Dale was an active Republican serving his party as County chairman one year and in other capacities. He was a candidate for County Chairman this year.

He was married to Miss Florence G. Fox, a daughter of Thomas J. E. Fox of Liesburg, Virgina, October 18, 1888. She survives him with two children, Virginia Dale and John M. Dale Jr. He is also survived by his aged mother Mrs. Mary Dale of Lemont.

Besides being a prominent attorney Mr. Dale was connected with many business enterprises, being a director of the Centre County Bank, a member of the Eagle Iron Company at Roland, one of the owners of the Palace Sale and Exchange stable and an active member and promoter of the Centre County Fair Association.

Socially he belonged to the Bellefonte Club, the Nittany Country Club and the Masons, being a member of Constans Commandery, Knight Templars. He also belonged to the Royal Arcanum.

The funeral services took place Monday afternoon at 1 o'clock at the residence on East Linn street, conducted by Rev George I. Brown. The remains reposed in a beautiful casket in the west parlor and were surrounded by many beautiful floral emblems.

The active pall-bearers were John Blanchard, John M. Shugert, J. L Montgomery, W. Fred Reynolds, H. E. Fenlon, H. R. Curtin, John I. Potter, Dr. Joseph Brockerhoff.

The honorary pall-bearers were Gen. James A. Beaver, Hon. John G. Love, Ellis L. Orvis, H. C. Quigley, Harry Keller, W. C. Heinle, Col. J. L. Spangler, John Ardell, James L. Hamill, S. C. Burnside, Adolph Fauble, T. A. Shoemaker, Frank McCoy, James Harris, Dr. George F. Harris, Geo. R. Meek, John I. Potter, A. G. Morris.

The remains were taken on the 2 o'clock train to Lemont and the interment was made in the Branch cemetery near that place

MRS. REBECCA WALKEY.

Wife of Henry Walkey Died at Her Home in this Place.

Silently the angel of death entered the home of Henry Walkey Tuesday morning at 3 o'clock and claimed for its own a kind and loving mother, wife and friend, Mrs. Rebecca Walkey.

Mrs. Walkey had been ailing for the past two months with stomach trouble and death was due to this disease. The end which came very peacefully was not unexpected, yet nevertheless it was a great shock to the bereaved family who are almost overwhelmed by their great loss.

The deceased was born in Spring township October 19th, 1843 making her age just 60 years 4 months and 18 days. She was the daughter of Emanuel and Pauline Noll, now deceased. She was married at Centre Hall Feb. 11, 1868, to Henry Walkey by Rev. G. M. Settlemyer and for thirty-five years they have resided in Bellefonte.

She early in life identified herself as a member of the Reformed church and was a faithful and conscientious follower of its teachings. She enjoyed the esteem of a large circle of friends and acquaintances who sincerely mourn her death.

Surviving her are her husband, Henry Walkey and one son, Harry. A daughter, Sadie, wife of Harry Johnson, died in 1897.

She also leaves five brothers and one sister, namely, Emanuel, of Bellefonte; John, of Kansas; James and George, of Milesburg; Thomas, of Pleasant Gap; and Mrs. Mary Swartz, of Sommersett.

The funeral will take place this afternoon at 2 o'clock from the house, Rev. Ambrose Schmidt, officiating. Interment in the Union cometery.

An Interesting Old Deed.

The Gazette and Bulletin says: Register and Recorder Harder, in going through some old papers while moving his office into the new quarters in the court house annex, came across an old deed dated 1773, three years before the signing of the Declaration of Independence. It is a for some land purchased of the Indians, and has an English seal attached.

Barker—Shaffer.

On Sunday evening Feb. 28 at the residence of the bride's parents at Coburn, Miss Anna M. Shaffer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Shaffer, and John M. Barker, of Ingiby, were united in marriage by Rev. I. N. Bair.

THE SUBJECT OF MATRIMONY

Which Demanded the Attention of The Economic Club.

TOPIC WELL HANDLED

Many Avenues of Employment Open to Women--.The Word Spinister Has no Terror For The "Manly Girl."

REPORTED BY JAMES A. FIEDLER

At its last meeting the Economic Club, for some reason or other, drifted into the discussien of a subject which had hitherto been somewhat foreign to its line of thought. The club has repeatedly dwelt at large upon various phases of political, commercial, industrial, historical and other subjects pertaining to the past, present and future, but never before this particular meeting were the evening's exercises devoted almost exclusively to an experience meeting on the vital subject of matrimony. That word! What a vast amount of future happiness or misery it embraces for those who enter upon its unknown sea!

It will be remembered that the Economic Club is composed of married men. No cynlical bachlors nor youths existing entirely on hope have so far sought admission into its ranks. Also after a member of the club has reached the age of five-score years, he is shifted onto the retired list and suitably pensioned during the remainder of his earthly existence. One of the membership requisites is that the applicant has at sometime or other actually entered upon the great matrimonial sea and by his own experience is thoroughly capable of discussing such subjects as these, from an intelligent standpoint. Our members occupy various positions in life, and some of them have passed through still more "various" experiences since entering upon this great sea, for good or bad The members of the club do not by any means consider themselves perfect in all things, and some of them even admit that they see very little if any good at all in themselves, and that for one cause or another they have been miserable failures in more respects than one. Others of them started out in life with bright prospects which have grown brighter from day to day until now they can sit with perfect complacency among the distinguished of any other organization from anywhere.

Therefore, among such a varied assortment of members, each one at a regular meeting being expected to and freely giving his experience, some highly encouraging and some particularly sad reminiscences are chronicled At the recent meeting to which reference is here made, the entire evening was devoted to the question of matrimony and its varied results for weal or woe. Where "woe" was the predominating feature of a member's experience, the almost unanimous sentiment of opinion among the listners was that the member giving his sad experience is simply reaping the harvest he sowed himself, in one way or another.

Some few members intimated that so far their married life was a failure and that they were mistaken in the choice of their life partners, but the secretary's record of the proceeding fails to show a single instance where a member was bold enough to put all the blame on his side of the co-partnership. In every instance the member admitted that perhaps if he had done differently since he made that binding vow, his domestic affairs today would be in a far more promising and satisfactory condition.

If for one feature above another this club and its members are to be commended it is that of honesty of purpose and sticking to the truth, The membership is large and the influence of its members for good or evil is amazing. Think of the blasted hopes of the almost numberless victims! Who is to blame for it all? True it is not in every instance, the sole fault of a member of this club, but such instances are so isolated and so few that their enumeration in this connection would be entirely out of place.

The Club is however, unanimous in its opinion that many a hopeful maiden is largely culpable herself for being too hasty and indiscreet in her selection of a life partner. In this she can in no manner blame anyone but herself. If she is indiscreit in her selections, or in too great a hurry in early life she may have ample opportunity in later years for regretting her action and repenting her folly. But "what is the use in locking the stable door when the horse is stolen?" Can be as fitly applied to this subject as to any other of the day. Our club did not pass any particular resolutions on this subject, at the meeting in question, but it did formulate a few expressions of opinion and directed that they by properly spread on the minutes of the organization. They are as follows:

It is the unanimous opinion of the Economic Club of America that any and all young or older maidens who, during these times, enter upon the matrimonial sea without carefully, yea, prayerfully studying and considering all the phases of the choice of their life partner, do so at their own great risk. If all goes well they are to be commended, and if all goes wrong they need blame no one but themselves.

In years gone by there may have been some excuse for the young girl, becoming impatient and greatly abhorring the aspect of becoming a "spinster," because that was about the only occupation she had, if living in an unmarried state. But today, how vastly different in the situation! The time is rapidly coming, if it isn't already here, when the well-behaved and manly girl has a dozen opportunities of securing remunerative employment to the young man's one. The phase "manly girl" may appear paradoxical, but it doesn't sound nearly so whimsical as would a "girly girl." Numerous avenues of employment for thoroughly and fairly well educated women offer themselves today which were never thought of fifty and more years ago. Think of the thousands upon thousands of young and older women who today earn a most liberal competence in stores, and all kinds of offices in the capacity of clerks, stenographers, typewriters, bookkeepers, etc, etc. Even the medical, legal and other professions are becoming pretty well crowded with femenimity and all seem to be doing well, many of them far excelling their male competitors. Everybody knows that the pedagogic profession is today filled by women to the extent of 90 per cent. and who can or will dispute their superiority over men as successful instructors in either public or private institutions of learning?

Summing up the situation, and making a candid comparison, the situation today is exactly the reverse of what it was half a century ago. Then there seemed to be but comparatively few opportunities for women employment and not sufficient men to properly fill the positions open, while today a man needs an especially superior talent to compete with his femanine competitor and more positions open for women than there are women to be found to fill them. Then think again of the millions upon millions of women making good wages in factories and mills. The domestic help problem in cities and towns is a momentous one of the day. Not a metropolitan daily newspaper of the day appears in which you will not find column upon column of "female help wanted" advertisements. The day is coming fast when the male portion of the family will be compelled to wear the apron and the female department will conduct the elections, run the government and do the banking. In other words, the situation has completely reversed itself during the last half century, and the time is near at hand when it becomes the young man to fear the old slogan of "spinsterhood."

This picture may be drawn rather vividly, but, dear reader, isn't it about a fact? Then why should the fair and intelligent young maiden of today be in such great haste to enter that matrimonial sea for fear that if she doesn't embrace the the worthless opportunity she'll soon reach that age of spinsterhood? With all these opportunities offering themselves for steady and remunerative employment in one highly respectable capacity or another, the girl who throws overboard a lucrative and permanent position for the sake of a shiftless and worthless husband thereby sows the seed for all the harvest of misery which she may be compelled to gather and endure.

But the wise girl says—Oh, but the young men are not all worthless, my Mr. —— is just the right sort of a young man, so don't interfere with me." Of course your Mr. —— is a model, but they are evidently not all "models," even though they be so considered. If every young lady's intended were a

The fastest horse, the best cow and the smartest man are quite commonly as homely as a hedge fence.

And now comes the best surgical authority in the country and asserts that the seeds of fruits are very rarely, if ever, the cause of appendicitis.

Five sheep of the mutton breeds can be kept on the food consumed by one cow, and, counting work and care, the five sheep will pay better than the average cow.

The team of horses and wagon cannot move one ton one mile for much less than 25 cents. The modern locomotive and forty ton freight car move it for less than a cent.

While modern inventions have radically changed methods of farm work, none so far has dispensed with the importance of having a place for everything and seeing that such thing is kept where it belongs.

In a general way it may be said that it is always easier to get rid of surplus water from a tract of land than to counteract lack of moisture. Drainage methods are comparatively simple when compared with any means of irrigation.

There will never come a time when the gospel of cleanliness will not have to be preached in season and out of season as the foundation of successful dairying. Man is prone to dirt as the sparks are to fly upward, and dirt and dirty methods are ever the bane of successful dairying.

If you want a fancy price for your road horse, there is almost as much in properly fitting him for the market as there is in the breed. The country is full of slouchy, ungainly, ill gaited lunkheads of horses which, had they been properly handled and broken in, would have made attractive and stylish animals. As much in this line can be done for a horse as for a young man.

By some subtle process of moral reasoning there can be found not a few farm tenants who think it perfectly legitimate to steal all they can from the man whose farm they work. It is this evil which makes the farm owner look with so much favor upon the cash rent system. Thrasher men could tell some funny stories, if they would, about the tenant and the absentee landlord on the share rent deal.

It would seem as though there was need of some missionary work along the line of teaching a portion of the American people that wood alcohol is not the right sort of stuff to "licker" up on. While it has the taste and smell of old rye, it is as merciless as mob law and always makes a job for the undertaker. In fact, it is about as good a servant to this gentleman as the familiar gasoline can.

It is of the utmost importance in the matter of adjusting a fire loss, where the property insured is of a miscellaneous character, to have a complete inventory of the property insured. The want of such an inventory when a loss occurs gives the adjuster every advantage and a chance to scale the indemnity down. If you carry insurance in any company on your household goods, for instance, make a list of such goods and have it in case you meet with a loss.

Set out a strawberry bed in the spring, even if you raise an acre less corn. Life is short, and the best things should be got out of it, and when a man can combine a Jersey cow and a milk pan full of big strawberries raised in his own garden he has come about as near striking a good thing as he ever will. The man who comes to town and buys two boxes of dirty, stale berries, gets his wife to make a shortcake and sits down and returns thanks for the good food given him to eat is not living up to his opportunities, sure as you're born.

Farmers can, far more often than they do, use the local paper as a means of communicating with the general public. When a farmer wishes to buy some certain thing in the line of stock or grain, or needs help on the farm or in the farm home, or has for sale such things as do not naturally seek the common market, a local advertisement in his home paper will nine times out of ten find him some man with the thing he wants or a buyer for the thing which he desires to sell. This thing is worth trying. The cost is small, and the results are almost always satisfactory.

Any soil is a good one where blue grass takes possession of it as it is pastured.

Any country town can well afford to provide a rest room for the farmers' wives and children when they come to town.

The dipper of cool water just from the deep well and the bowl of johnny-cake and milk still hold their own as standard farm luxuries.

The majority of men are followers, not leaders. This is true on the farm. If men would do more original thinking and less imitating they would accomplish better results.

Plants in pots set in sunny windows in the dry air of a stove heated room lose their moisture very rapidly. More house plants fail on account of being thus dried out than from any other cause.

An intelligent horse in Scotland, which had cast a shoe while in the pasture, of its own accord went to the blacksmith shop, a long distance away, and held up its foot for the smith to replace the shoe.

Many people are afraid to sleep in a room with a window open. This is folly. Bad air is the doctor's ally. Don't sleep in a draft, but get all the fresh night air into the bedroom possible. Fresh air, sweet dreams and restful sleep go together.

The manager of one of our prominent northwestern insurance companies said recently: "If I could do business exclusively among Germans I could write risks at one-fourth the price I am now compelled to ask. When a German has a loss we know it is an accident."

We have altogether too many people who would like to live as did the children of Israel in the old manna days in the wilderness, only that they would go hungry half of the time because they would not get up early enough in the morning to get their daily ration.

There are not a few men who want no better proof of their business ability than to start out in the morning with an old plug of a horse and return at night with a better kind of a plug, $3 in cash and an old harness. Every little town has one or more of this sort. Their wives generally take in washing to support the family.

Originally the hen, a wild bird, laid but one sitting of eggs and then proceeded to hatch them. Man has improved her egg producing faculty until she may now be made to produce 250 eggs in a season. So don't blame the old hen if, after she has laid 150 eggs or such matter, she wants to sit for awhile. Some men want her to lay all the time and never get into the incubating business at all.

While the large barn will give the most room and conveniences for the money invested, it is still an open question whether throughout the northwest it is good policy to build such barns. The risk from fire, lightning and cyclones is so great and the loss of such barns from these causes usually so complete as to building and its contents that we should hesitate long before building this sort. Smaller buildings, isolated from each other, would seem to be the better and safer way to provide barn accommodation for the farm.

The inexorable law of business is that you will get just about what you pay for; very rarely more, more often less. If you pay a low price for a thing, you nine times out of ten get a cheap article. There is no philanthropy in business. Bargains, so called, can very easily be frauds and deceptions. Cheap twine is very apt to be poor twine, and cheap groceries short in weight, adulterated or spoiled. Be willing to pay a fair price for a good article and don't think you can beat the man who is smarter and meaner than you are at his own game.

Americans are the most wasteful and extravagant people on earth in their use of meats. Long accustomed to cheap meats, but little care and economy have been and are used in the cooking and serving of them. It is not far out of the way to say that not to exceed one-half of the meat ordered and served to the guests at our hotels is ever eaten, and this unused portion of the very choicest cuts at best but furnishes material for soup stock. Higher priced meats will have the effect to stop some of this waste and draw attention to the economic and nutritive value of the less expensive cuts of meat. We might learn much from foreigners, especially the French, in this matter of economizing on the family meat bill.

The primary sources of a nation's wealth are its natural resources—the timber of its forests, the fish of its seas, lakes and rivers, the minerals buried in its hills, the elements of fertility locked up in its soil. Just as man develops these natural resources he creates wealth. The stick of timber, the can of salmon, the ton of coal and the bushel of corn, as produced by man, are each original and created wealth. The man who buys and sells the timber, the fish, the coal and the corn creates no wealth, but he who fashions the timber into a house or burns the coal to drive the engine of some factory or produces from the corn a variety of other products is a wealth producer. Only as a man by his labor gives an added value to some natural product can he be termed a wealth producer.

THE LAW OF REVERSION.

If one could take six distinct and different breeds of fowls—for instance, White Brahma, Leghorn, Houdan, Langshan, Plymouth Rock and Wyandotte—and let the breeds mix, hit and go miss, for six years, what sort of breed of fowls would one have at the end of that period? Well, for one thing, the law of reversion would be very nicely illustrated. The distinctive features of each of these breeds would disappear. The ultimate product would be just common scrub stock, with the chance that the Leghorn type would suffer the least in the metamorphosis, as that breed more closely follows the original type of jungle fowl from which all our poultry originally came. This same process of deterioration and reversion to original types operates just as powerfully with stock of the improved breeds as it does with poultry, and it explains why when a man starts out to cross Jerseys with Holsteins, Shorthorns with Polled Angus and all this sort of cross breeding he soon finds himself a breeder of simple and original scrubs. The improved breeds of poultry and stock are, we might say, purely artificial productions, the results of careful selection by man, and need to be continually re-enforced and fortified by additions of blood from animals excelling in the particular quality for which the breed may be noted. Now you can see why the grade sire will always run a herd of stock or a flock of poultry down and how important it is to select only the purest bred sires if a herd of cattle or a flock of poultry is to be improved in quality or even maintained in excellence.

IOWA'S BLACK SOIL.

Better than lots of things is the rich black soil of the Mississippi valley farms. What a soil this is—the bed of prehistoric ocean, which has hoarded the accumulated detritus of mighty glacial forces which in ages past robbed the mountains of their primal fertility and stored it up for us, just as now and then some old pirate's pot of ill gotten gold, long buried, is turned up by the plowman of today. No state in the Union possesses so large and uniform an area of this black and treasured wealth of the past as Iowa, farm after farm, section after section, county after county, from Minnesota to Missouri, from river to river, every acre fertile, every farm a garden spot. Just as in a side of leather or in a boiled ham the best cut is toward the center, so the very best of this good black soil of the Mississippi valley is found in Iowa, a soil alike indifferent to excess or scarcity of rainfall, a soil which, like an old friend, can always be depended upon, reliable as a Scotch Presbyterian elder, easily pleased as a child, generous as heaven, responsive as its own fair girls, forgetful of wrong or neglect as a sister of charity, prolific as the hoary ocean, dabbled in by infancy to make mud pies, acquired as a precious heritage and lived from by the matured man and welcomed by him as a last resting place when the day of life is done.

SOME EXPLODED THEORIES.

The drainage of ponds, lakes and marshes has nothing to do with the rainfall of a country. While such drainage will dry the earth, it will not dry up the heavens. Neither will the cultivation of the surface of a dry country do anything toward promoting a greater rainfall. Both of these scientific fallacies were believed in by many a few years ago. Drainage will greatly facilitate the release of any excess of rainfall which the earth cannot absorb and so tends to increase the volume of our floods and freshets, while the cultivation of sparsely watered areas will tend to conserve such rainfall as the country may have. Neither will the mechanical disturbance of the air above the earth by explosions produce rain unless the clouds are saturated with moisture, which would fall anyway, yet many believed rain could be thus produced not very long since. Experience knocks the stuffing out of lots of humbugs—scientific, political and religious.

DON'T ASK TOO MANY QUESTIONS.

Some inquisitive woman has started the inquiry as to how the common wrapping paper used by grocers is made and whether it is so cleanly in its makeup that it is a fit covering for food which we buy to eat. The making of wrapping paper is a good deal like the work of some books—too many questions should not be asked. The paper generally in use for this purpose is made of straw, which is reduced to a fibrous condition by the use of alkali and maceration. It is not always that the straw is as clean as it should be, and we have seen material go into the maw of a paper mill the less said about which the better. When the paper is used and kept dry it is probably all right, but if the food product which it incloses moistens it—well, if you don't know how the paper is made you probably won't object. As we said before, people can ask too many questions about things of this sort.

LIGHT HOGS PREFERRED.

The light hog—the one weighing about 200 pounds—is becoming more and more popular with the packers, for the people have found out that the young pig is better eating than the old hog. The same thing is true with regard to beef, the well finished 1,100 pound long yearling steer now commanding the top prices of the market. Early matured animals from now on will always command the best prices.

DISARMING THE GODS.

How Chinese, Japanese and Hindoo Boys Prepare For School Life.

Among the eastern nations the beginning of school life is a critical time for the child. The priest or astrologer must be consulted to choose a lucky day. Every precaution must be taken to avert the jealousy of the gods, whose malice is especially directed against a fine boy.

The Chinese father who adores his son will take the utmost pains to convince the powers of the air that the boy is of no account. The child may be given a despicable name, like flea or chutze, a pig, or, more insulting still, he may be given a girl's name. The boy may be started off to school wearing a girl's dress and one earring, and if the deception is complete this will be the most effectual of all, for even the gods do not care for girls in China.

The Japanese schoolboy wears hanging from his belt a little red bag containing a brass tag with his name and his parents' name and address upon it. He must have his paper umbrella and his fan, and in a gray bag upon his arm is a jar of rice for his luncheon. This quaint little fellow has probably made his offering at his own private shrine to Tenjinsen, the god of penmanship.

When the Hindoo boy has found an auspicious day to begin school he is taken to the god of learning, Sarasvati. Here the little supplicant presents his offerings of rice and betel nuts and repeats the letters of the alphabet after the priest. Thus he is entered into the ways of knowledge in the very presence of the god.—Everybody's Magazine.

Over-Work Weakens Your Kidneys.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes.

The kidneys are your blood purifiers, they filter out the waste or impurities in the blood.

If they are sick or out of order, they fail to do their work.

Pains, aches and rheumatism come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble.

Kidney trouble causes quick or unsteady heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is over-working in pumping thick, kidney-poisoned blood through veins and arteries.

It used to be considered that only urinary troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all constitutional diseases have their beginning in kidney trouble.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

Take It Away.

When winter's keen and piercing blast
Is cold enough to freeze one's ears,
When steely pointed snow flies fast
And on the window frost appears,
It really seems to me that I
Find winter's pleasures rather shy.

The furnace fires occasion take
At just such times to make a call;
So they go out, and I must make
A trip downstairs and carry all
The ashes and the cinders out
And try to put the cold to rout.

I get a rap upon the shin
That makes me lame for half a day.
A flying splinter cuts my chin.
I'll not repeat the things I say.
When I get through and go upstairs
I find I'm needing some repairs.

I need a bandage on my voice;
It's badly strained by things I've said.
A plaster on my shin, a choice
And soothing lot of ointments spread
Upon my chin, and goodness knows
How many patches on my clothes.

And so old winter need not wait
Upon my account to close his show;
With him I'll gladly make a date
At any time to see him go,
And if the fare he cannot pay
I'll buy his ticket any day.

Those Hustling Department Stores.

"Does anything ever happen to the clerks here?" patiently inquired the lady who had made a purchase and was waiting for her change.

"Oh, yes," answered the salesman of whom she made the inquiry, looking retrospective. "Sometimes they die, sometimes they get fired"—

"Which do you suppose has happened to the one that went to get my change?" interrupted the lady.

But she was wrong. The clerk came up at that moment with the money.

The Star Course.

The Star Course for the season of 1904 1905, will be under the control of W. C. T. U., and for the benefit of the Petrikin hall fund. It might be well to again emphasize, that the course this winter, was under the management of Jno. D. Arnold of the Central Lyceum Bureau, the W. C. T. U., simply renting to him Petrikin Hall, for the season. As all know, after the first concert the manager, claiming it would not pay, as many who had signed for the Course, when tickets came to be delivered declined taking them, giving as a reason they were going to take tickets for the University Extension course. Mr. Arnold felt he could not afford to continue when so poorly supported, hence his contract was violated with both the Public and the W. C. T. U. With the Public we are glad to know the ticket money has been refunded to all holders who presented their claims at Sheffers Store. The W. C. T. U., however has been less fortunate, as they have not only lost financially (through no rent of Hall) but have been criticised unjustly with the failure to refund money invested in Course tickets. The money never passed through their hands in any way. This was so stated at first, but it escaped the notice of many.

The Course for the coming season, may possibly be a trifle higher on the tickets, but it is to be most carefully selected and only the best talent engaged. If the public will recall former courses brought by this society, among the lecturers were. Will Carleton, Dr. Russell Conwell, several times, Rev. Sam Jones, Dr. Mourse, whose Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, made such an impression, Leland Powers, Col. Geo. Bain, Dr. Dixon, and others of well-known reputation. We are confident they will show their appreciation of the efforts of the W. C. T. U,, to give only the best to be had for the money. We hope this season to include : Jacob Reis, the great philanthropist; whom so many desire to hear, and whose book "The Making of an American" is intensely interesting, and should be read by all.

Fascinating Question.

"What was the star of Bethlehem?" is a question that has puzzled mankind for many ages. Many believe that it may have been the perfectly natural phenomenon, unusual enough to deceive the Magi into a belief of a miraculous sign. The reappearances of the planet Venus are separated by intervals of 584 days. The date of Christ's birth is not certainly known within four years, and it is entirely possible that when the birth occurred, the planet Venus may have been nearing her brightest phase as an evening star. To the Magi traveling across the desert toward the west she would have appealed every evening shining with extraordinary splendor in the direction of Palestine, growing brighter as they approach. If their arrival in Palestine coincided nearly with the period of her inferior injunction with the sun, she would, be at her brightest when they neared the mountians of the Holy Land, would seem early in the evening to touch the nearby horizon where Bethlehem lay, as if to indicate to them that there was the end of their journey, and very shortly after their arrival would disappear from the sky, being swallowed in the overpowering rays of the sun. The nature of Venus might easily have been unknown to the "Wise Men." Their wisdom was doubtless of a speculative, metaphysical, and mystical character, which would readily accept as miraculous an unusual phenomenon that seemed to have some special relation to themselves.

A Remarkable Kill.

Skillful taxidermy has preserved a grouse, at the throat of which hung a weasel in a death grip, when shot while on the wing by C. K. Sober, of Lewisburg, Pa., during a hunting trip in the White Deer Mountains of the Blue Ridge, says Field and Stream.

Mr. Sober, who is a wealthy lumberman and member of the Pennsylvania State Game and Forestry Commission, in a letter to Field and Stream, descibes this remarkable kill as follows :

"I was out hunting ruffled grouse. It was raining very hard. I heard a grouse fly from the ground among a clump of laurel and red brush. The bird was about fifteen yards from me and seemed to rise from the ground in a labored manner. While it was partly hidden by the underbrush, I noticed that it appeared to be retarded in its movements, and its plumage, especially about the neck and underparts generally, seemed to hang loosely. I supposed the feathers of the bird were wet, and this accounted for its curious flight and odd appearance when on the wing. I shot the bird when about thirty yards from where I stood, on the wing, and on going to where it fell I found it dead, and a large weasel clinging to it. The weasel had caught the grouse by the neck, and when the bird flew was clinging to its body. The bird had been instantly killed by the shot, but the bloodthirsty weasel was unharmed by the shot pellets."

The gold cup which Mrs. Langtry received when she won one of the great races at Ascot, England, some years ago, will be exhibited in the Trophy Room of the Physicial Culture building at the World's Fair.

A band tournament will be held at the World's Fair beginning September 12 and ending September 17. The contest is open to all military bands except the government bands of the United States, Mexico and Canada which are regularly employed by the Exposition. A total of $30,000 is offered in prizes.

Maine will make a big display of apples at the World's Fair. A car load of big red apples, wrapped in tissue paper and again in waxed paper, and carefully packed in bushel boxes, were received at the World's Fair grounds early in February and were placed in cold storage, where they will be held until the opening of the Exposition, on April 30.

In making her general mining exhibit at the World's Fair Virginia will erect a house entirely from stone mined within the state's borders. In addition to the building, there will be another classified exhibit embracing all minerals and precious stones abounding in the state. The cost of the materials and constructions of the building is estimated at $100,000.

Values Daughter at $2,000

The other day a petition was presented in court at Hollidaysburg by Donato Fritz, through his attorney, A. V. Dively, esq., for a writ of habeas corpus to regain the possession of his wife, Connel Katharine Fritz, who, he alleges, is unjustly detained in the custody of her father; Frank Calrotina, at his home in Altoona. Fritz is 20 years old and his wife is 16. They were married last September, with the consent of their parents, but have never lived together. The marriage ceremony was performed by Justice Levi Leedom, of Hollidaysburg, and the father who is a strict church man, contended that there was no marriage since the ceremony was not performed by the clergy of his church. He took his daughter home and refuses to give her up to her husband. He indicated his willingness, however, to let Fritz have her for a consideration of $2,000. The case was heard Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

Treed by a Bear, He Nearly Froze to Death.

Treed by a hungry bear, David Renner, of Johnstown, was almost frozen before help arrived and he could get down from his uncomfortable perch.

Renner was walking from DuBois to Clearfield when, at a secluded place in the road, he met a big black bear. Bruin showed no disposition to stop when they met, and Renner at once took to a tree. The bear walked 'round and 'round the tree and showed not the slighest inclination to go away. Renner was in the tree in the severe cold for a couple of hours before a team came in sight. Then the bear fled and Renner was rescued, almost frozen.

The Way They do in Iceland.

Icelanders never think of "locking up" at night, and yet only two cases of thieving have occurred in many years. One was a poor man with a broken arm who stole several sheep to save his family from starving. The punishment meted out to him was that food was provided for his family, he was placed under medical care and work was given him when his arm had healed. The other case was of a foreigner who stole seventeen sheep. The law demanded that he restore the value of the thefts and then leave the country or be executed. Naturally, he left.

DER PENNSYLVANIER

Mischter Drucker!—Mer segt als, es wär d'r letscht Strohhalm, was dem Kemeel d'r Buckel brecht hät. An den Spruch gemahnt es mich allemol, wann ich heer, daß zwee Nochbere, was viele Johre gute Freind ware, uf eemol wegich ere Kleenigkeet ausfalle un gar an die Lah gehe. Es scheint mir dann, daß se net ganz aufrichtig zu enanner ware, daß dem Eene schun lang des net gefalle un d'r Anner sich wegich ebbes sunscht gergert hot, jusht hen se net angeloßt, bis dann wegich ere kleene Ursach d'r Rädet losgange is. D'r letscht Strohhalm hot dem Kameel d'r Buckel gebroche.

Letschte Woch is beim schmärte Squeier en Kehs verhandelt worre, was grad in selle Lein schlagt un den ich for Eier Zeiting berichte will. D'r Dschoh Fertelstecher hot den Dän Ripper for Dämetsch verklagt, die sei Hund daheem angericht hot, nochdem d'r Dän dem Hund en alte Blechkann an d'r Schwanz gebunne hot. D'r Dschoh is als d'r Kläger zuerscht ufgerufe worre un hot sei Sach verzählt wie folgt:

„D'r Dän un ich sen Nochbere un mir hen allfort mit enanner fortkumme kenne, un ich hät die Klag net eigetrocht, wann d'r Dämetsch net zu groß wär for es zu stände. Die Sache sen so: Letschte Dunnerstag en Wuch war ich am Mischtfahre, un wie ich um bal zehe Uhr in's Haus bin for en Beiß zu nemme un en Glas Milch zu drinke, wie ich als for kammen dhu, do hör ich uf eemol en ferchterlicher Lärm im Hof. Wie ich rauskumm, do hen sich mei Geil vum Poste losgeriffe, d'r Wage umgeschmisse, die Deichsel abgebroche un stehe vor em Stall un zittere, als wann en Pack hungrige Welf hinnig se her wär. Die Hinkel, die Ente un die Gäns hen gekrische un sen umhergefloge wie nimme gescheid un es is mir anfange selwert bang worre. Do uf eemol seh ich mei Hund mit ere große Blechkann am Schwanz wie verrickt im Hof rumrenne. Ich hab gekrische: ‚Wasser, Wasser! kumm doch her, es is jo jusht en Blechkann—Du dummer Esel vume Hund!' Awer nix hot gebatt. Er springt iwer die Portsch in die Kich nei, wo er die alt Großmutter vergelsiert hot, daß se außem Schockelstuhl gefalle is un ihr Schmohkpeif un ihr Brill in Sticker verbroche hot, un bevor ich Halt vum Hund hab kriege kenne, hot er noch d'r Disch umgeschmisse un en Pitscher un zwee Schisle in taused Sticker verbroche. Ich hab net im Sinn, en rother Sent zu berechne for d'r Schred, den mir doborch gehat hen, awer for die anner Dämetsch hät ich gern, daß d'r Dän bezahle dät un ich meen, zwanzig Dhaler wär ken biffel zu viel.'

„‚Well, Dän,' segt d'r Squeier, ‚was hoscht Du in dere Kehs zu sage?'

„‚Mischter Squeier, schun iwer en Johr is seller werry Hund regeler in mei Hof kumme un hot unser Schlapp gefresse, un ich hab ah net viel drum gewe, so lang as ich selwert kee Juhs derfor gehat hab. Awer for bal drei Wuche zurick hab ich zwee kleene Säucher kahft un ich kann nau die Schlapp selwert juhse. Ich hab den Hund mehner as en Dutzed Mol fortgejagt, awer er is als wieder kumme. Schieße hab ich ihn net gewellt un so hab ich den alte Weg genumme for ihn loszuwerre un sidder is er ah net meh kumme. So en arg Wese hät des dumm Vieh ah net zu mache breiche wege dere Blechkann. Mir is es jusht leed um die arm alt Großmutter. Sell is all, was ich zu sage hab.'

„D'r Squeier hot sei blohe Brill ufgedhuh—en Zeeche, daß er arg hart Denkes dhut—un dann gesaht: ‚Des is en Hundskehs dun Anfang bis zu End. Catching Tigers

How the Planters of Sumatra Snare the Fierce Man Eater.

Wily "Stripes" Is Lured to His Fate by a Goat -- Big Steel Traps Hold the Beasts Secure.

Tigers may be found all through Asia from India to Korea, but in no part of the continent are they so indifferent to the dangers of the environment of the white man as they are in the Malay peninsula and the Dutch Indies. In Sumatra and throughout the Dutch Indies generally the white man is usually too busy to go tiger hunting, while the Malays and Battacks consider the pas time too risky.

The imported Indian, Chinese or Japanese cooly would no more think of hunting "stripes" than of climbing rainbows. On the other hand, it is the tiger that generally hunts the cooly. Now, coolies are, comparatively speaking, expensive things. The planter has to import them and support them at great cost, and he cannot afford to allow them to become food for tigers. Being too busy with his tobacco growing to go hunting, he must resort to other means to keep down the crop of tigers. To build a jungle cage trap takes time and caution and skilled natives, so that is out of the question. Therefore the planters import immense snap traps almost identical with rat traps, only very much larger and stronger. They are similar to the bear traps common in this country, but the very largest size is required for a tiger.

To set the trap the first process is to build a small, stout inclosure of bamboo, and inside of it is tethered a goat. In front the trap is so placed that in order to get within striking distance of the goat the tiger has to step on the trigger. The trap is then loosely covered with jungle leaves, etc., and is anchored by a stout chain to a tree.

The rest of the process is simple enough. No watch has to be kept. Nobody has to stay by the trap and mind it. The tiger going forth to forage hears the goat bleating. He thereupon turns swiftly and noiselessly in the direction of the sound. When he reaches the bamboo inclosure, seemingly erected for the protection of the bait, he halts and sniffs and prospects about generally. The tiger, it may be explained, though immensely powerful, is also naturally nervous and suspicious of things that savor of man's handiwork. When the goat detects the approach of her enemy she redoubles her bleating and thereby whets the appetite of her natural destroyer and simultaneously emboldens him. Once or twice he circles the trap cautiously, drawing nearer at each turn. He sees one side of the pen almost entirely open. A few bamboo crosspieces stretch across it, lashed with withes of rattan. One blow of his great paw, he knows right well, will shatter them.

Slowly, slowly, step by step, he crawls nearer and nearer the pen. His miserable victim bleats loudly in the ecstasy of terror. A step closer—

Snap!

In a flash the great, cruel steel jaws of the trap have crunched together on the mighty forearm of the tiger. A frightful roar breaks through the silent darkness of the forest. The dumb stricken goat sees a frantic mass of black and white and yellow squirming madly in the darkness. The great brute shrieks in despair and agony and tugs at the steel trap in helpless, hopeless fury. Away in the sheds where the coolies sleep, the Chinese and Javanese laborers start up at the noise of his bellowing. They know that the tiger is caught and feel relieved and happy. At dawn the estate manager and probably some of his European assistants march off to the trap with their rifles and put the captured beast out of his misery.

How to Advertise.

The householder in glancing through his morning paper has his attention caught by the more attractive advertisements. Advertising is an essential factor in modern business methods, and to advertise wisely the business man must understand the workings of the minds of his customers and must know how to influence them effectively—he must know how to apply psychology to advertising.—Atlantic.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., March, 8, 1904.

O' chief of the Sandy Seraglio
O' boss of superfluous oats!
I'm sorry for you, and I'll tell you
How you can get rid of your spats:
Your rows with your wives and the nation
Will end with this one stroke of wit:
Indulge in a new revelation
That's it!
Don't grumble of slander and libel,
Nor talk about hiking away.
Hatch out a new leaf for your Bible
And stay.

The examination of Reed Smoot, Apostle, elected to the Senate from Utah, is proceeding before the Committee on Elections of the Senate, Seventeen Mormon witnesses are present, summoned and brought hither by the government. At their head is the venerable President of the Mormon church, Joseph F. Smith, a nephew of the celebrated founder of that religion. Before a committee of Senators he Friday stated that he had five wives who had borne him eleven children, since the government manifesto; and when asked why he had disobeyed the law proclaimed in that prohibition, he frankly stated that to desert his wives and abandon his innocent children would be unmanly and he preferred to receive any punishment that might be inflicted. He said that he had not married an additional wife since that time and that no Mormon had added his wives since that prohibition was issued. The purpose of the anti-Smoot crusaders is to prove that Senator Smoot represents the church and not the state, but the President of the church denied this roundly and repeatedly and declared that the church had nothing whatever to do with the election of civil officers.

On the 23rd inst, the Senator indulged in a spirited running debate on the Naval appropriation bill, as presented by Senator Hale of Maine. In round numbers the bill will carry one hundred millions of dollars for the next fiscal year. While this is a very large sum Senator Hale admitted that if the naval program is carried out, in a few years the naval establishmen twill cost two hundreds millions of dollars annually, and there will be 90,000 sailors afloat. This will make the navy of the United States second only to that of England. Expansion, and the retention of the Philippine island, was given as the reason why such a great navy is needed. Senator Depew pictured glowingly the great results that might be expected to flow from our Oriental commerce when each of the four hundred millions of Chinese wears a cotton shirt made in America, and eats Parker House biscuits made of America grown wheat. Already the government has a fleet of twenty four war ships in Asiatic waters to protect American interests. Incidentally, the question arose whether the guns on the new ship should be mounted in revolving turrets, or on platforms, on barbette, as in the English navy. As no one could answer this technical question it was dropped. There was little opposition to the bill, and it will pass.

Work on the Panama canal will now be in order. As the Senate has confirmed the Commissioners selected by the President and their $10.000 salaries now begin to run, they will take a trip to the zone and look over the ground. It is proposed to raise the city of Colon some three feet or more, in order to make it possible to secure drainage. Admiral Walker is not as optimistic as could be wished. He says persons who think the canal will be begun immediately, except tentatively, are very much mistaken. No digging for two years yet. It is proposed to invite the President to cut the first shovelfull of turf.

The government is going to help out the farmer, show him how to conduct a farm, pay part of the expenses and let him pocket the resulting profits. The farms will be called United States Diversification farms. The first one is to be situated near Colombia, S. C., and thirty others are to be operated in the Southern states. One fourth of a farm not less than fifty acres may be planted with cotton; the remainder must be devoted to feed for live stock. This may be hogs or dairy cattle. Seeds and one half of the fertilizers, will be given, and an instector will call once a month.

MESS. W. Harrison Walker,
Henry C, Quigley and Harry Keller.
Committee.

GENTLEMEN,

Your communication of yesterday containing the sad news of the death of John Mitchell Dale, Esq., came to hand, and your request therein has been complied with promptly.

We have understood that Mr. Dale was a good lawyer—the epitome in distinction of character for the reason that good lawyer, necessarily, is not only a good man, but also a great man.

Our Association, no doubt, will take proper action at its coming meeting. Extend our heartfelt sympathy to family and friends.

I am, my dear Sirs,
Yours Respectfully,
CHAS. J. REILLY
Secretary of the Lycoming Law Association.

A Death at Salona.

Wert G. Smith, of Salona, died Tuesday evening at 6 o'clock, after a lingering illness with typhoid fever, aged 34 years. He is survived by his wife and three small children, one boy and two girls. Mr. Smith had been feeling badly for some time and on election day, which was a very cold one, he caught cold, which confined him to his home; typhoid fever thereafter developing, his case became a very bad one, which baffled the skill of all physicians, and resulted fatally as stated above.

His funeral occurred Friday morning at 7 o'clock at the house, where short services were held, immediately after which his remains were taken to Rebersburg, Centre county, where services were conducted by Rev. B. B Uhl, of Salona, in the Lutheran church of that place. Burial at Rebersburg.

J. Zeigler issues a call for a convention of Centre County Prohibitionists and their friends, to meet in the Opera House in Philipsburg, on Tuesday March 29th, at 2 p. m, to elect delegates to the State convention at Uniontown, Fayette county, June 8th; and to transact such other business as properly belongs to it. Mass meeting in the evening. Rev J. H. Hector and Jubilee singers in the lead. Chas. R. Jones will be there.

model and the only true and good one whence comes all the misery in after life of which we see accounts published every day.

If you have a good position, earn a comfortable and respectable livelihood by your own exertion, then be independent and doubly sure of yourself and all who may endeavor to persuade you differently.

It may seem strange for a club of married men to thus concern themselves about young women, but such is the case nevertheless. No young lady is justified in exchanging a certainty for an uncertainty, and thereby heaping upon herself a long life of misery, instead of certaintity to enjoy and maintain herself through her own noble and individual effort.

Obtain the best possible thorough education first and then fit yourself specially for some particular avocation in the line of which your tastes may lead you Scores of positions are open for you as soon as you are competent to fill them. Secure one, do your work well and keep in the line of promotion. Such a step will attract to you any number of those "model" young men of which you are dreaming. Out of the coterie thus attracted you can then have your pick, and if none presents himself which suits your taste, you have the satisfaction of being able to maintain your own dignity and, in the quaint but true old saying, be "able to paddle your own canoe."

A good education can be secured today almost for the asking of it, which is far preferable to being too hasty and indiscreet in entering upon the matrimonial sea and report at leisure through all the balance of your life. Far better be a woman banker of today, with the thousands of your associates, than a miserable, heart broken married woman of tomorrow.

Isn't this sound logic?

Mrs. John Jackson.

Mrs. Anna Lucy Jackson, wife of John Jackson, died at her home in Tyrone at twenty-five minutes past 3 o'clock Monday morning. She had been in delicate health for many years, but her serious illness began only about five weeks ago. Two weeks ago she suffered a slight stroke of paralysis, which was the immediate cause of her death.

The maiden name of the deceased was Anna L. Pennington. She was born at Pleasant Gap in Centre county, on January 16, 1844 and at death was aged 60 years, 1 month and 21 days. In early life she was married to John Jackson, who survives with the following sons and daughters: H. Francis and Charles L. Jackson, at the Tyrone home; Mrs. George Clark, Warriorsmark, and Mrs. Calvin Robbins, of Tyrone. She is also survived by her step mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Pennington; who resides at Milesburg, and two half brothers and one half sister, viz: Frank Pennington, of State College, John Pennington, of Sandy Ridge and Mrs. Ellen Woodring of Milesburg.

The family moved to Tyrone from Buffalo Run Valley, Centre county, eight years ago, and it has been their home since then.

From girlhood until she went to Tyrone the deceased was connected with the Methodist church. There she became a member of the United Brethren church. Owing to ill health in the later years of her life she could not be active in her church, yet she was devoted to it, as she was to her family.

Funeral services were conducted at the home at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, by Rev. J. E. B. Rice, interment to follow at Tyrone cemetery.

Ulrich-Maize.

At the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Maize, at Millheim at 1 o'clock p. m, on Wednesday, March 2, Miss Rosa Maize and Samuel L. Ulrich, of Watsontown, were married by Rev. I. N. Bair.

The bride is a well known and popular young lady of this place and until recently was one of the employes in the Commercial telephone exchange.—Millheim Journal.

YOUNG FIREMAN KILLED.

Samuel Lego Loses His Life at Martha, on Bald Eagle Valley Road.

Monday morning about 5 o'clock, Samuel Lego, fireman of a freight train coming west on the Bald Eagle Valley railroad, at Martha Furnace, leaned out from between the engine and tender and was struck by a car standing on the siding, which knocked him to the roadbed.

Death was evidently instantaneous, caused probably by a bolt head of the car striking the unfortunate man on the forehead. The remains of the young fireman were taken to Tyrone and prepared for burial by Undertaker Graham.

Samuel Lego was the son of Wesley Lego, and was born at Fowler in the Bald Eagle valley. He was 21 years old on the 10th of last August. Three years ago he was married to Miss Eva Weston, who with one little son, Earl, survives. His father died a number of years ago. His mother, now Mrs. Ridgway Woomer, survives and resides in the Bald Eagle valley. Mrs. Clyde Woomer, a sister, resides in Tyrone, and Wilda and Luther Woomer, half sister and half brother, are at the home in the valley.

The regular run of the deceased was on the mountain road, but he was on temporary duty on the valley road. He was considered a good and reliable young railroader. He was a member of the order of Railroad Trainmen and of the Pennsylvania Railroad Relief.

The funeral will be held this morning. Interment will be made at the Bald Eagle cemetery.

Meeting of the Bar Association.

The Centre County Bar Association met Monday morning March 7th at 10 o'clock to pay its tribute of respect to the memory of John M. Dale Esq. The meeting was called to order by Hon. John G. Love P. J., who paid a touching and beautiful tribute to the departed brother and referring to the many times death has come to this Bar in the last two years.

Resolutions prepared by the committee were presented and read by John Blanchard Esq. After reading and moving the adoption of the resolutions Mr. Blanchard spoke feelingly and earnestly of the life and character of the lamented brother.

Ellis L. Orvis followed in paying his tribute, refering to the many personal associations during their College course the reading of law in the same office, business interests, legal associations etc.

J. C. Meyer and Col. Wilbur F. Reeder both spoke very feelingly of the pleasant relations that had always existed between Mr. Dale and the other members of the Bar. Clement Dale and John Hamil spoke of his boyhood days. Col. J. L. Spangler touched on the social side of the departed and Edward Blanchard spoke of the splendid example he had set to young men by his strict honesty and straight forwardness of purpose. Hon. A. O. Furst, W. Harrison Walker and A. A. Dale also made appropriate addresses.

Philippine Soldier's Will Get $2.000.000.

SHARON, Pa., March 9.

District Attorney Joseph V. Cunningham, who was captain of the Sixteenth Regiment in the Spanish-American war and later captain of the Forty-second United States Volunteers in the Philippines, has just won a victory which will result in the distribution of more than $2,000,000 among the 42,000 United States volunteer troops.

An act in Congress in 1901 gave two months' extra pay to all troops serving in foreign lands in compensation for the loss of furloughs on pay.

Adverse decision by the Comptroller of the Treasury prevented payment, on the ground that the act applied only to Spanish-American war soldiers.

Captain Cunningham has fought this through the courts until he has gained a favorable decision. It will affect several thousand soldiers in this state.

NOTE.—Our Bellefonte boys who served in the Philippines will profit to the tune of about $48 apiece by this decision.

Caught a Big Trout.

Boyd B. Wilson, the Creamery man captured Friday morning what is probably the largest trout ever taken out of the stream hereabouts. It measured 24 inches in length and weighed 6 pounds. The creamery is located on Phoenix street along the banks of Spring creek and after the high water went down it left Mr. Trout in a puddle of water on high ground just in front of the creamery and it was an easy matter for Mr. Wilson to catch him.

Although this is not trout season Mr. Wilson will not put his prize back into the stream as such a trout lives off other fish and it is said would eat a trout 16 inches long. Instead the trout will be turned over to Fish Commissioner Meehan who will place him on exhibition at the Bellefonte Hatchery.

We sincerely wish Mr. Gilliland much success in this new undertaking.

Miss Nora Poorman while visiting at this place was suddenly called away on Friday morning. We think her calling was not of a very serious nature as she returned on Saturday evening. We are glad to see her return so soon as J. H. C. has been in a a very uneasy frame of mind during her absence.

We are sorry to say that the temperance lecture which we spoke of in last weeks issue did not prove as attractive as was anticipated. It may have been due to the inclemency of the weather or possibly the people (who claim to be christians) have worldly pleasures more at heart, which if allowed to dominate will overule christian civilization. We base our belief on circumstances which transpired immediately after the close of the lecture, when the speaker (Mr. Irvin) announced that he would be disengaged on the following evening and should they (the church people) show their willingness to have him remain, he would speak the following evening. In discussing the offer, we are again sorry to say it met with disapproval by the majority of the people present, giving the excuse that they had advertised a Bazaar for that evening which would occupy all of their time and that they would have no time to devote to the causes of Temperance. However we are glad to say there are a few who can say that they have improved every opportunity that has been given them in the cause of Temperance. We hope there will be more attention given to this great cause in the future. I move we adjourn.

The Mountain House was haunted last week by two "Fairies" who came from the Pine Glenn Woods to pay their respects at the Court of "King Cole."

Time makes many changes—for better or worse as it suits his fancy—sometimes, of course with the co-operation of the thing changed. Below we have a touching illustration. Our city prophet says that twenty-three years hence all poetry will be written from actual life. He also says that there will be a second Longfellow who will compose the following lines on "The Village Baker." We have recently had among us the future proprietor of this village bake-shop which shall be located just out of Pittsburg—about 20 miles from the city limits. None but he who is able to peer into the future would predict such a fate for the stylish and prosperous looking young man who shook the dust (or snow) of Snow Shoe from his feet a few days ago. If we are to place confidence in the the assertion of our prophet, his (the baker's) deterioration has already set in. What was the cause? Why, disappointment over misplaced affections which were ruthlessly cast aside for those of another. Could we be permitted to merely mention the names of the rivals in question, we know everybody's sympathy would be with the unfortunate one. His name suggests all that is sweet, juicy and good, while that of the other describes very bluntly the intellectual seat of an animal, that the descendents of the Patriarch Abraham regard as unclean. And then the baker is already in business for himself while the one with the unsavory name is only a student at —— College. The latter's becoming enamored of the baker's "surething" caused the hopes of one of Bellefonte's estimable maidens to be dashed to the ground. Here are the verses which will be written by Longfellow the Second, Anno Domini, nineteen hundred and twenty-seven, showing the sad fate of the baker :—

THE VILLAGE BAKER.

Under a weeping-willow tree
The village bak'ry stands.
The baker, a bachelor is he.
With cold and clammy hands;
And the products of his doubtful skill
Do taste quite like the sands.

His hair is sparse, and wont last long:
His face he ne'er did tan;
His brow is wet with feverish sweat;
He eats whate'er he can,
And turns his face from all the world.
For he owes most every man.

Week in, week out, from morn till night,
You can see him punch his dough;
You can see him roll the stuff all out,
Then into the pans 'twill go,
For his oven though it bakes quite hard,
It bakes extremely slow.

THE RATIONAL CARE OF THE COMPLEXION.

Facial Massage and Application to the Skin. Danger of Cosmetics.

By Christine Terhune Herrick, Author of "Cradle and Nursery," "First Aid to the Young Housekeepers," "Housekeeping Made Easy," "What to Eat," "In City Tents," Etc.

(Copyright, 1904, by Christine Herrick.)

Was there ever a woman who did not wish to be good looking? If so, she must have been, in the childish phrase, "to good to be true." That is, unless she was already so pretty that she felt she had nothing more in that line to ask of Fate.

Even the beautiful woman must take care of her good looks. Nature may bestow these but she does not undertake to keep them in order. Once in a rare season one finds a woman whose complexion seems to take care of itself, but she is such an exception that it is hardly worth while to bring her case into consideration. The majority of women have to work to keep their skins in order and their efforts must be the more strenuous if they have been careless of them in youth.

When I speak of care of the complexion I do not mean that one must devote herself too constantly to this work. Very few busy women can afford to give the time that complexion specialists declare essential to the preservation of beauty. When one sees a woman who does all demanded of her in this line, she is not likely to have leisure for anything else.

I know one such woman. In her girlhood she was the acknowledged belle of her native place. Her complexion was like a rose leaf, her figure was exquisite, her features were regular. Having won the reputation of a beauty she felt she must live up to it. She has done so and it has taken all her time. At forty-five she is still engaged in preserving her charms. She never rises until eleven o'clock. She is most diligent in the care of her diet. The time she spends upon facial and bodily massage leaves her little for anything else. Verily, she has her reward. Her golden tresses are plentiful and smooth, although there is a touch of something not entirely due to nature in their colouring. Her rose leaf tint of skin is still to be seen, although it may not be as fluctuating as when it was altogether home made. Her figure she has been able to retain by dint of exercise and she is still a beautiful woman. But has it been worth while? There are very few women who would think it so, or who thinking so would be able to give the time to achieve the result. Too few find it feasible to follow the rules by which Patti declares she has held her youth with her so long—three square meals a day, eight hours sleep at night and three hours exercise daily in the open air. It would be a good thing if every woman could allow herself this treatment, but it is not for those who must work in their homes or elsewhere,

The benefit to the skin must be wrought from within outward, not from without alone. That is, the body must be kept in good working order by vigorous exercise and proper food and then the foundation will be laid for a good complexion. Not all the external applications in the world will help without these fundamentals. But when these are secured, there are other things to be done to preserve the complexion in order to make the face attractive.

In the first place, the face must be kept clean. Not only by mere washing with water and a cloth or even by the use of soap and water, but by something more thorough than these. The surface soil may be taken from the skin by the ordinary washing, but to get the dust from the pores a more radical course must be followed. An unguent must be selected that will soften the skin and coax the dirt from its interstices.

Too much care cannot be given to the selection of the cream or skin food or whatever it may be that is used for this purpose. Cold creams by the score may be purchased but a large proportion of these do more harm than good, especially if applied to a delicate skin. Either they make it so tender that it chaps and scales readily, or else they promote a growth of hair, or they coarsen the skin. But there are good cold creams and if one will take pains it is not hard to make a choice.

In order to get the best result for the face, it should be cleaned at bed-time. First it should be washed with a soft cloth dipped in warm water and rubbed on a good soap, or dipped in almond meal. To some skins the latter is unsuited and their owner would do well to confine themselves to a good soap. Highly scented soaps should be avoided. A sponge should not be used for the face, pleasant as is the touch of it. The best judges say it is impossible to keep a sponge entirely clean, whereas the cloth can be made anti-septic. When the face has been washed—and the cloth should go into all the corners and be applied again and again—the face must be rinsed in warm water and patted dry with a soft towel. In washing or in wiping stroke the face upwards.

Now comes the cold cream. A little should be taken on the finger tips and rubbed into the skin, with outward and upward strokes from the middle of the face. The rubbing should not be too hard and yet there should be enough pressure brought to produce a glow and to stimulate the circulation. Each part of the face should be treated in detail The forehead should be stroked from the middle towards the temples and up towards the hair. The temples should be rubbed and the corners about the eyes where the first fine wrinkles display themselves should receive special attention. All around the eyes the flesh should be massaged and the cold cream rubbed in thoroughly. The lower part of the face, the skin about the lips and where the smile or the droop of the mouth has left lines must be treated. Afterwards the cold cream must be wiped from the face with a soft cloth and the skin again washed and dried. If it is very dry in tendency a little more—a very little more—cold cream may be rubbed in and left on over night, but the best judges are against leaving the grease on the face all night.

This is not a very troublesome business, although it may seem a burden to a tired woman when she goes to bed. But like every other care of the body it is a matter of habit and once established, the custom of giving five minutes at bed time to beautifying comes to be taken as a matter of course. If a woman thinks the preservation of her complexion worth while she will not grudge this small amount of time bestowed upon it.

I have spoken of this sort of thing being done for the preservation of the complexion. If it is necessary to woman who have good skins in the first place, it is much more essential for those who are not blest in this respect, or who through carelessness have let their skins fall into a bad state. They will not get off so easily as the woman who have naturally good skins or who have taken proper care of them. To redeem their looks they must follow the process I have described above and do even more. They must take up facial massage more thoroughly, rubbing the lined forehead round and round with the finger tips, always stroking upwards. This circular movement is to be given to the cheeks and about the eyes as well.

A great many women have a tendency to double chins as they advance in life, and this, too, they can combat by rubbing, drawing the flesh upward from the throat towards the chin and stroking with the palm of the hand.

All this advice is not meant only for middle aged woman, however, although they need it more than young girls. These latter have the insolence of youth. They scorn these precautions, apparently thinking that their beauty of skin and colour will abide with them forever. Once in a while one will find a girl who is prudent enough to appreciate the fact that she cannot treat her skin with utter neglect and expect it to retain its beauty.

"But what can I do?" says one of them. "Must I give up golf and bicycling and horseback riding and boating in order to take care of my complexion?"

By no means. On the contrary, it is by such exercise as this that one keeps one's body in order and insures a good complexion. But do not be careless of the skin in your zeal for out door sports. These things ought you to do and not leave the others undone. Before you go for your outing rub a very little cold cream or skin food into your face. Rub it in well, so that it will be absorbed, not left to lie on the surface. Then wipe the face off with a soft cloth or flannel dipped in a little pure powder. Plain talcum is good for this, or even cornstarch. Do this work carefully, so that the powder will not lie on the skin in streaks. It is to protect the pores from dust and dirt. Then go ahead and enjoy your horseback or bicycle ride or your row or your game and don't think of your complexion. You have nothing more to do about it until you are at home again.

When you are back in the house, proceed to cleanse your face by very much the same method that you use at bedtime. Wipe off the dust with a damp cloth and then wash in warm water. Never put cold water on the face after exercising. Apply the cream, wiping it off with a soft cloth. You will probably find a good deal of dust on this in spite of the first application of cream and powder. Wash again in clean warm water, dry gently and if you wish, dust with a little powder.

The girl who follows this plan will not escape tan altogether. Probably she will not wish to escape it, but will rather seek to have some evidence in her complexion of her out door life. But at least, she is not likely to redden and blister and peel and be an eyesore to others and a distress to herself until the time when her face has burned to a uniform hard red or brown.

HIGHWATER CAUSES FLOOD

Heavy Rains and Melting Snow Cause Streams to Overflow.

GREAT DAMAGE DONE.

Bridges Washed Away--Railroad Traffic Interfered With--Howard and Bishop Streets Flooded.

ALMOST EQUAL TO FLOOD OF 1902

The weather man not satisfied with giving us the hardest and coldest winter in the memory of the oldest inhabitants, to cap the climax sent upon us Wednesday and Thursday a heavy rain storm which together with the melting snow caused all the the streams in and about Bellefonte to rise and overflow their banks.

Spring creek, Logan's Branch and Buffalo Run began rising about 4 o'clock and by 6:30 all were raging torrents. The Buffalo Run was in such condition that the Bellefonte Central made no attempt to go out, in fact they could not get from their engine house at Coleville to the depot in Bellefonte. The Buffalo Run converted the lower part of Coleville and Bellefonte in the vicinity of the Glass works into a seething lake. The houses of those residing near the Glass works were surrounded with water. Street Commissioner Shaughnessy, always alive to the boro's interests, was up town early trying his best to keep the sewers and gutters open. After he left home the water surrounded his home and how he ever got home at noon unless he went in a boat is more than we can tell. The water surrounded the P. R. R., round house and overflowed the tracks so that trains on the Bald Eagle Valley could not get in or out. The Lewisburg branch of the P. R. R. seems to have escaped the flood so far.

They report very high water down through Penns Valley but the only dangerous point is the high bridge near Rising Springs.

The sewers on both Bishop and Howard streets soon became stopped up and the gutters overflowed the water coming down the middle of the streets a perfect river. The damages to the streets and properties will be considerable. Many cellars on the above streets were filled with water. The Watchman office had 5 inches of water in their press room by 6 o'clock. All the cellars in the Bush House block were full of water early in the morning.

The flood started with a heavy storm of thunder, lightning and rain at 2 o'clock Thursday morning.

The race track at the Centre County Fair grounds is under water and it is feared great damage will be done.

The Pennsylvania Match factory and Mr. Ray's Shirt factory were unable to start up Thursday owing to the fact that the water entered their boiler rooms putting out the fires.

The Water works were also in trouble owing to the flood and many residents of the town were without water for several hours.

The bridge from the P. R. R. track over to the lime kilns on the Milesburg pike was moved off its foundation.

High water extinguished the fire under the Bush House boilers thereby leaving landlord Daggett without steam for awhile.

Captain Scott's Coon.

Everyone has heard of "Davy Crockett's 'coon," the one which said, "Doh't shoot, I will come down." To "come down like Davy Crockett's 'coon" is a colloquial expression in common use Crockett and the 'coon that came down are so popular associated that to attempt to disconnect them is well nigh to attempt the impossible. To explain a thousand times that it was not Davy Crockett to whom the 'coon come down here without effect; the world has it "Davy Crockett's 'coon," and the world will have it so, and there it stands.

The real hero of the 'coon story was Capt. Martin Scott; the story was a tribute to his skill as a rifle shot. Scott was a brave man and a good American soldier of the Mexican War period, and he deserved to be remembered; but even such credit as the 'coon story attributed to him has been filched from him and given to another, who did not need it.

Scott was a native of Vermont. From his youth he was famous as a shot. An exploit of his twelth year was the slaying, unaided and alone, with his father's purloined smooth-bore, of a marauding bear which had defied the entire posse comitatus of the grown-ups of the neighborhood. There were no laws in those days for protection of sheep stealing bears. A feat of Scott's mature years was the cure of a sick man by shooting him. This heroic treatment was administered in a duel. Scott shot his antagonist through the lungs. The man had been sick with consumption, but from that moment began to mend, and got well. If Scott did not actually effect the cure, he, at least had the credit of it.

The 'coon story was printed about the year 1840, five years after the death of Crockett. It was told of Capt. Scott, and ran like this.

Capt. Martin Scott was out in the woods one day with a party of friends, hunting. They were scattered through the woods, each hunting separately. One of the party at length came upon a raccoon that was sitting in one of the highest branches of a very tall tree. He fired at him and missed. One by one the rest of the party came up and tried their hand, each missing the distant 'coon who grew saucier as they proceeded. At length Capt. Scott arrived, and was in the act of pulling trigger, when the 'coon looked slyly around the limb and said:

"Who are you?"
"I am Scott."
"What Scott?"
"I am Capt. Scott."
"Are you Capt Martin Scott?"
"The same."
"Well," said the 'coon, unlimbing himself, "you need not shoot; I will come down."

Swede Robbed of $100.

John Benson, who has been doing carpenter work at Slate Run, repentant and mournful, appeared in Newbury on Thursday afternoon with a tale of woe, Possessing just one dollar, he was looking for a bed for the night, intending to walk back Friday to his work to start over again in saving his earnings. According to his recital of his trouble he fell in with bad companions, was gotten under the influence of intoxicants and then robbed.

Benson is a Sweds, and he told a straightforward story to the effect that he came to Williamsport to consult a physician and also to deposit his savings of several months, $100, in a bank. In a Pine street hotel, near the Reading station, he claims some men told him that grip was his illness and a glass of whiskey would help him. He took the whiskey, and then he lost his grip, eventually becoming in such a condition that even this strenuous weather didn't bother him, for he didn't know but that roses were blooming. He claimed that all of his $100 was stolen and the dollar he had to offer for lodging was given him by a policeman.

COL. M'BRIDE'S - PET -

By CYRUS DERICKSON

Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure

One day, while some of the officers of the Bengal lancers were tiger hunting, they found a baby tiger three months old and took it back to cantonments and presented it to their commanding officer, Colonel McBride. In due time the beast became full grown and was in and out of the bungalow like a favorite dog. He was apparently tame, but now and then he moped and snarled and betrayed the ferocity lying dormant in his nature, but on such occasions he was given the whip and always crouched in submission at his master's feet. Like the average dog, the tiger had his likes and dislikes of men. Some of the officers never laid hands on his head without being rewarded by a low, deep growl, while he was ready to welcome and make friends with others. Among the former was Major Swift. He had exchanged from an English cavalry regiment and been received cordially. He was a gay bachelor of forty, supposed to be possessed of a large income and a man who was first in society and sport of all kinds. That he had lived a fast life was known to all, but that fact was not permitted to count against him. His many friends boasted of his gains or losses on the race track or at cards and held him up as free handed and a good fellow.

There had just been a breath of scandal about the major at Allahabad. It had been softly whispered that he had run through his patrimony and was hard up and that his success at cards was not always due to luck alone. These whispers did not circulate far and were stamped as the result of spite and jealousy. No one but the major himself knew that they were founded on fact and that they were the sole reason for his exchange. He was tendered a farewell banquet by the officers of his late regiment, and the soldier or civilian who had dared to repeat the gossip of Allahabad would have been silenced very quickly. Had the major been a man to take any one into his confidence and reveal his true situation he would have been obliged to say:

"At forty years old I am without a pound I can call my own; my estate is mortgaged for its full value; I am in debt to the money lenders; my last two horses are not paid for; I owe my tailors and am being pressed for payment, and if I should lose £20 at cards tonight I should have to borrow the money to pay the debt of honor. I am simply living on my past reputation as a man of money, and I see no way to better my circumstances except to become a card sharp and fleece the officers at this cantonment."

That would have been the truth and only the truth, but the major would have sent a bullet through his head rather than make any such admission.

There was much sporting blood in the Bengal lancers, and the officers played for high stakes. The major did not have to encourage them to gamble; they were waiting for him, but they soon had cause to regret that he had appeared. His bets were high and his luck phenomenal. But for his continued extravagance he could have paid off much of his indebtedness with the money won during the first six weeks. Those not in the game praised his nerve and talked of his luck; those who always came out losers did a great deal of thinking, but were silent. At the end of two months whispers were heard again. No one could trace them to any authentic source, and they did not exactly charge the major with card sharping, but when they reached the colonel's ears he listened and planned. He himself had been a heavy and continuous loser and had not always been a philosopher as his gold changed hands. There had been games at his bungalow as well as elsewhere, and the first time that Major Swift made his appearance there those in his company had considerable curiosity to know how he would be received by the colonel's pet.

The tiger no sooner caught sight of the new officer than he ceased to frolic and became sulky and morose. There was no outbreak of temper, but he lay down and fastened his eyes on the major as if reading him through and through, and it was evident that there was dislike and distrust of the man. The beast continued his glare until the colonel's man was ordered to take him away and tie him up. The colonel had said nothing to any of the officers, but he had secretly determined to watch the major's play and discover if there was a cause for his winning the way he did. The major could have had no hint of it, and yet perhaps intuition had given him warning, and he was not himself at all. He played and won, but he also played and lost, and his losses were far greater than his gains. Seated at his right hand and taking no active part in the game was the colonel, and he never left his chair from first to last. The major came out loser by £200. On the next night he lost £75, on the third night £100. He made good his first two losses from his former gains, but when he rose from the third sitting he knew that he would have to borrow of a brother officer to pay his losses.

The officer had not been detected cheating, but he had been out of luck. The colonel may have put two and two together in his own mind, and so perhaps might one or two of the players, but the party broke up with the greatest apparent good feeling all around, and half an hour later the colonel was in bed. He was a sound sleeper, and it was partly for this reason that at night the tiger was given free range of the bungalow. There were no sentinels stationed outside the place, but a native watchman slept on the veranda. At 2 o'clock in the morning this man slept, and the colonel was in dreamland. The tiger was stretched on the floor, blinking and dozing, when he suddenly pricked up his ears and opened wide his eyes. He had heard a step on the earth outside. As he listened the step came nearer. It being in the heat of the summer, the doorways were guarded only by mats. Presently the animal saw one of these slightly move, and he got the scent of a stranger. He did not growl or spring up, but the fire in his eyes grew brighter, and his teeth began to show. The man, who slowly and carefully pushed the mat aside and crept into the room, which was one in which the guests had been entertained that night, ought to have caught the blaze of the tiger's eyes in the darkness, but he did not. With footfalls as gentle as a hare's he stole across the room to the colonel's desk. The desk had been carelessly left unlocked, and he took from it a bag containing the money to be given to the winning horses of the races to be held a week later. There was £600 in the bag, and the robber had just turned from the desk to make his stealthy escape when there was a roar and a bound, and he went down with a crash. It was hardly a minute before the colonel was at hand with a light, but the beast had done his work. A blow from his paw as he sprang had broken the man's neck, and teeth and claws were still at work. He was promptly shot, and then the colonel bent down and rolled the dead man over that he might see his face.

"Heavens, but it's the major!" he gasped out as he started back. "It's the major, and he has the bag of money clutched in his hand!"

Not Absolutely Helpless.

Some few persons still cherish the idea that all women are absolutely helpless in business matters and that they are so lacking in financial ability that they cannot safely be trusted to handle money.

Mr. Black belonged to this class. He had been in the habit of paying all the household bills at the end of each month, and his wife, although allowed unlimited credit, had never had an allowance. One day the Blacks happened to be passing the comparatively new building in which the bank was situated.

"Do you know, John," remarked Mrs. Black, "I have actually never been inside the bank since it was built more than two years ago?"

"You haven't!" exclaimed John. "If that's the case I guess I'd better give you a check this month and let you pay the bills. Do you think you'd know how to cash it?"

Mrs. Black received the check. That evening Mr. Black asked, not without sarcasm, if she had succeeded in indorsing it properly.

"Oh, yes!" returned Mrs. Black cheerfully.

"How many bills did you pay?"

"None. It seemed a pity to waste all that money paying bills."

"Then what in the world did you do with it?"

"Oh," returned the little woman serenely, "I just deposited it to my own account!"—Collier's Weekly.

She Plans Houses.

The only woman ever admitted to the Master Carpenters' association is Miss Louise Catherine Hinck of Montclair, N. J. Miss Hinck is a graduate of Vassar and of the New York university law school, but she prefers to spend her time in putting up beautiful and convenient houses, and many of the most attractive homes in Montclair are of her designing. She thinks that women can do this work much better than men, and the women who live in her houses are of the same opinion.

Any man or boy who will shoot a red squirrel lacks the first element of a genuine sportsman. He is one of the gayest, most harmless and interesting of any form of wild life, is worthless for food purposes and should be allowed to live, yet some men will work themselves up into a perfect furore of excitement in the effort to kill one.

NEW YORK FASHIONS.

Elaine Roze Writes of the Correct Shirt Waist---Witching House Jackets.

The straight front corset a triumph in figure moulding.

It is a logical proposition that tremendous popularity usually leads to a revulsion in the taste of the fastidious, but the vogue of the shirtwaist no such revulsion is yet in sight. In fact the shirtwaist is more universally a favorite than ever before.

As to the correct cut, Forsythe models show a longer shoulder seam than last season. A snug fit over the chest is insured by the narrow plaits which are laid on either side of the middle plait from the shoulder down to the bust line. The release of the goods below allows for the slight pouch which extends down to the waist line.

The Forsythe model I have illustrated for you is one of the most popular and universally becoming ones. Expressing distinction in every line, this waist is made of all white fancy madras. It shows a group of plaits from the shoulder seam to the waist line. The simple shirtwaist sleeves are finished with a smart stiff cuff.

For wear with these smart Spring shirtwaists nothing is in better form than the stunning white pique coat, which is brought around to the front and crossed in the style of the English square. The simplicity of this style is most becoming to some faces, but for her who finds it too severe there were shown with these waists some pretty little conceits in embroidered linen and Japanese drawnwork.

My other illustration shows one of the latest models for miladi's negligee wear. It is one of those bewitching little garments that are taking the place of the once regal tea gown, expressing sweet simplicity rather than elaboration. Composed of robins egg blue Pewn de Crepe it makes a particularly attractive litile kimona, and while the colorings in this lovely material are exquisite, particularly in the creamy pink, pale gold and champagne shades, cream and oyster white are eqally modish, and have the additional virtue of being washable.

Just now the fashionable woman's figure is at its best a triumph, owing to the straight front corset, which in conservative models, such as the C. B. a la Spirite, have assisted women to correct Dame Nature's disposal of surplus flesh. The fashionable waist is not too small, but is supple, and while it has a straight front line, shows a well defined hip and back curve.

Snyder County Court Takes an Excursion

Boarding a special train, the Snyder county court, including judge, jury and attorneys, went on an excursion from Middleburg to Selinsgrove Tuesday afternoon. The return trip was made Wednesday evening, and business was resumed in the court house Thursday morning. The case which gave rise to this novel expedition was that of J. H. Seifred, for accident damages against the Pennsylvania railroad, called for retrial. It was first tried two years ago, and a verdict found for the plaintiff, but the supreme court ordered a retrial. After the jury had been drawn the order for the trip was given, in order that the jury might see the spot where the accident occurred. This is the first day there has been a jury trial in the Snyder county since last May, owing to the quashing of the panels at both the October and December terms. The grand jury found several true bills and was discharged.

Loss of Flesh

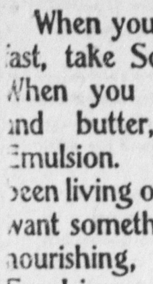
When you can't eat breakfast, take Scott's Emulsion. When you can't eat bread and butter, take Scott's Emulsion. When you have been living on a milk diet and want something a little more nourishing, take Scott's Emulsion.

To get fat you must eat fat. Scott's Emulsion is a great fattener, a great strength giver.

Those who have lost flesh want to increase all body tissues, not only fat. Scott's Emulsion increases them all, bone, flesh, blood and nerve.

For invalids, for convalescents, for consumptives, for weak children, for all who need flesh, Scott's Emulsion is a rich and comfortable food, and a natural tonic.

Scott's Emulsion for bone, flesh, blood and nerve.



We will send you a free sample.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

We learned that the hat belonged to Miss Fannie Knisely of this place, who while watching the flood from the High Street bridge, had the hat blown from her head by the high wind that was then blowing. The hat was a new one and had been purchased only a few hours before it was lost.
